

Stutz Color Samples

The Stutz dealers had, next to brochures, of course, some paint samples, to help buyers to choose the color for their personal Stutz.

In the early years, Stutz used paint from a company named "Glidden".

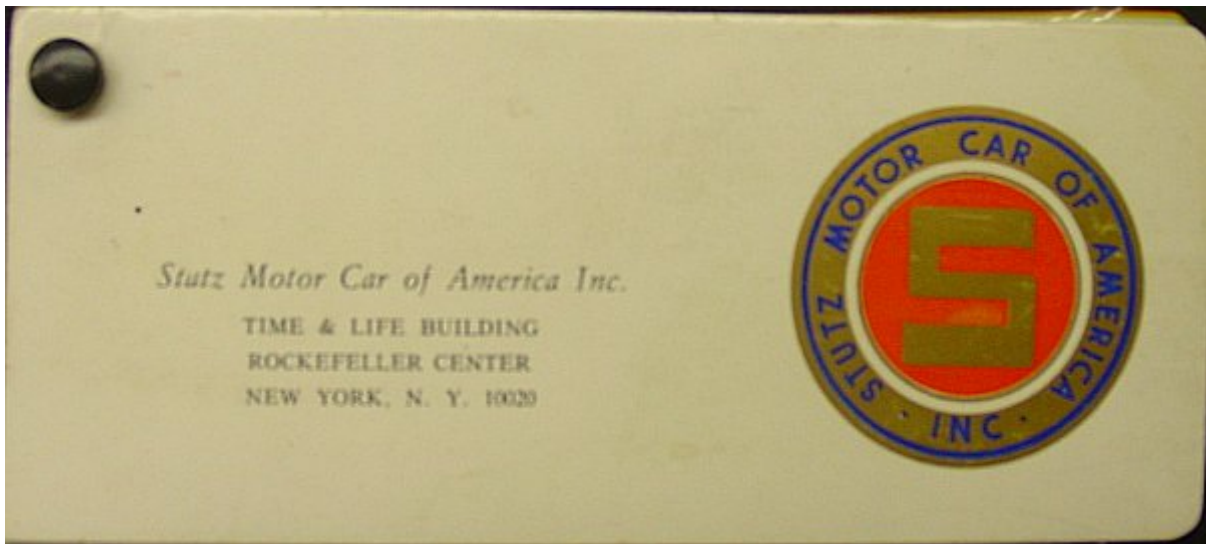

Interesting to see that the manufacturer "Saturn" was stated on the samples.

The colors from Glidden Salchi S.p.A. from Milano, Italy, were named (from top):

Of course, these colors were only used for the exterior, but the customers also had to decide about the interior color, that means the leather...

The leather came from Connolly, the same company that also sold leather to other luxury car manufacturers, like Rolls-Royce.

After being stored for a very loong time, I first have to work on the leather samples, before I will be able to show some color-pictures... Sorry!

VAUMOL LEATHER. Nature should show itself in every piece of high class leather. The growth marks, vein marks and other natural marks and variations of grain that go to make up its character are the charm and hall-mark of top grade leather. To conceal these characteristics by artificial means is to replace beauty by dull monotony.

It will be noticed that many of these patterns have a contrasting colour in the grain. This process which we call "Luxan Grain" has the effect of bringing out the natural character of the leather. Except in the case of the darkest colours, any of these shades can be supplied in this Luxan Grain.

"Vaumol" leather can be kept clean by occasionally wiping it over with a cloth damped in mild soap and water. Detergents and furniture polishes should NOT be used.
